Description :

Kurkure Machine

Technical Specification :

These crispy cheese snacks made by snacks food making machinery are formed from corn meal, water, oil and flavored coatings.

Cheese curls are an extruded snack, meaning they are cooked, pressurized, and pushed out of a die that forms the particular snack shape.

They are then baked (or fried, depending on the product) and flavored with oil and seasonings.

Today, we eat extruded corn snacks made by kurkure machine that are ball-shaped, curly, straight, or irregularly shaped depending on the shape of the die.

Flavorings added after baking or frying varies greatly and different brands have distinctive flavors.
